

Lévesque wants state capitalism

There may not be "dancing on the McGill campus" when Québec achieves sovereignty, but René Lévesque does expect McGill students to react to indépendance with open minds.

This statement by the leader of the newly-formed Parti Québécois was greeted with applause from the large audience in the Union Ballroom, where Lévesque addressed an ASUS-sponsored forum on the National Question.

Lévesque outlined the platform of the new party, which since the dissolution of the Rassemblement pour l'Indépendance Nationale on the weekend includes all sectors of the indépendantiste party in Québec. An independent Québec under Lévesque would follow the Scandinavian model of state capitalism, with government power being used to accomplish economic goals, but without "wholesale nationalization and mass take-over".

The private and public sectors of the economy would unite to combat American economic domination. Foreign domination would be fought by investment on the part of Québécois rather than by nationalization, except in special circumstances. Whatever an independent Québec could do, it would be better than the "branch-plant economy" and "outright satellite" status Canada now occupies.

The audience, which waited half an hour for Lévesque to show up, was attentive and appeared concerned primarily with the feasibility of Québec independence. Lévesque noted that Québec — "among the last of the nationalist groups in the world to achieve independence" — was better equipped for it than most of the other nations that had become independent in the last ten years.

At any rate, he said, "it would be better than what we have now. Sanity and normality will never be reached as Confederation becomes more and more rigid, and the situation continues where constitutional change is put together willy-nilly."

Lévesque said that Québec independence would conform to the standards of the "civilized world", and emphasized the importance of the new constitutional arrangements being worked out in a civilized manner. If this were done, he saw no obstacle to a common market between Québec and what remained of Canada.

He was confident that despite the reactionary tendencies in Québec society, "more social progress will be made than ever seen in the rest of Canada or all of North America" once it becomes a sovereign state.

"The Quiet Revolution," said the former Liberal cabinet minister, "has uncovered a pool of energy and talent lying in readiness" to reorganize Québec society.

Lévesque attacked Finance Minister Benson's recent budget as an example of the sort of thing Québec is subjected to in Confederation. The budget, he said, was a retrogressive economic act that "hits the small fry, the insurance companies, but lets the mines and petroleum companies go."

He said Benson was the real power in Ottawa, the "new C.D. Howe", while Prime Minister Trudeau was just a "façade".

Asked about a Gallup Poll that showed only 11% of Québécois supporting independence, he said he didn't believe that the Gallup Poll represented the true feelings of the Québec people and mass support for the Parti Québécois would manifest itself in the next election.

The meeting ended with one student's grabbing a microphone and tearing up a piece of paper to symbolize the lack of communication that would result if Québec separated from the rest of Canada, upon which another student grabbed another microphone to explain that the audience had been hearing an incorrect analysis of the social and economic system in Québec.

Vol. 59 — No. 21 Montreal, Tuesday, October 29th 1968, three cents.

STATEMENT OF THE CHIEF RETURNING OFFICER

Last night Students' Council resolved to cancel the Advance Poll that had been scheduled for Tuesday, October 29. At this point I deem it inadvisable to comment on the logic or reasons behind the move.

The regular Polls, a list of which appears elsewhere in these pages, will be held as scheduled on Wednesday October 30. Any full or partial member of the Students' Society may vote for the Constitutional Amendments and for the Senate Elections at any of these Polls.

I also confirm my statement printed on the front page of Monday's Daily stating in essence that there is to be no campaigning on either Tuesday or Wednesday October 29 and 30.

I would like to extend my personal apology to all those members of the Red Wing Society, the Scarlet Key and those who were to have manned the Polls today for the inconvenience this cancellation must have caused.

EUS executive calls for 'no' vote

Engineers debate amendments

The proposed constitutional amendments was the topic of an open meeting of the Engineering Undergraduate Society yesterday. Some one hundred people turned out to discuss a motion that the EUS executive "take and initiate political decisions whenever they affect Society members at large". This motion, moved by the EUS executive, also had recommended a vote against proposed new constitutional amendments.

Mike Clarke, Engineering representative on Students' Council, said that there was "something fundamentally wrong with the Students' Council". He said that putting a few more people on Council would not better the situation. Clarke advocated the "unité de base" principle, favouring strong faculty societies sending delegates to an "overall body". He would like to see the changing of the functions of Council under a new structure similar to that of UGEQ. However he opposed the idea of Students' Council reps being responsible to the executive of the faculty they represent, in this case the EUS executive.

Speaking to a motion during the meeting suggesting that the Engineering Undergraduate Society secede from the Students' Society, Clarke expressed the view that a "referendum on this issue is inevitable". On this point he was opposed by Nigel Hamer, who felt that such an attitude would only hurt the students' cause.

Hamer contended that the opposition of the engineers to the new constitution stemmed from their conviction that "something better will come along".

He agreed with Clarke that SC reps should not be held responsible to the executives of the respective faculties they represented but felt that students in general should determine policy. Hamer felt that the "general mass of students don't know that's going on and that this fact is exemplified by the EUS executive taking a stand on its own." Hamer, however, did not explain how the uninformed student body could competently determine policy for representatives on Students' Council.

Voting Wednesday only

SC cans today's poll

In a surprise last-minute move last night, Students' Council cancelled today's advance polls on the Senate elections and the constitutional amendments referendum.

The result of a long evening of heated debate and frayed tempers is that voting on both these matters will take place tomorrow only, as opposed to the previous plan to stretch voting over two days to ensure that more students would have an opportunity to cast their ballots.

The overturn came when Melvyn Niederhoffer (Graduate Studies) brought out a point of procedure and noted that Council must vote on the referendum before it could be constitutionally held, and that this had not, in fact, been done.

The debate that ensued, over the relative merits of the one and two-day vote, brought out many technical points and arguments, but the suggestions of "political football" sprang up soon.

The debate on the technical and convenience levels brought out these points in favor of cancelling today's poll:

- that the five polls were not evenly distributed over the campus, and were inaccessible to many students.

- that the polls would be swamped the first day, and there were too few of them to handle a deluge (normally 12 polls are set up, but an exception was made because this was to be an advance poll), and that some Council members could not find enough people to man the polls.

- Students had not had enough time to make up their minds, as the Senate candidates' pensketches had not appeared yet in the Daily (they were scheduled to appear today and are inside this paper) and the constitutional amendments had not yet been reprinted as a whole.

- that such a two-day polling was unprecedented.

Those supporting the two-day polling argued, conversely, that:

- the five polls were evenly distributed,

- the two-day vote was necessary to allow enough students time to vote on these crucial issues, as many were not on campus on one or the other of the days,

- that the election machinery was too far advanced to dismantle now.

The two McGills

Every time René Lévesque comes to this campus to speak, one can detect a change in the relationship between the politician and his Anglo-Québec audience.

Last year he participated in a graduate homecoming panel discussion and the reaction to him was hostile. The old McGillians, come straight from their St.-James St. offices, were exactly the sort of English who have reason to fear Lévesque, and behind their questioning one could imagine 600 wallets shaking.

But yesterday afternoon, René Lévesque returned to McGill to face a much different audience. And one member of that audience wanted to know exactly why he had come, why, with his schedule so busy, he considered it important to speak to English Quebecers about his views when only a very few of them could be numbered among his potential supporters.

Lévesque was hesitant at first. He said he didn't really know why he had come. Then he started to say that "things seem to have changed here quite a lot." He had watched closely, he said, reports of debates at McGill, conferences on Québec organized by McGill students, McGill's participation in UGEQ.

"When independence comes," he said finally, "I don't expect there to be dancing on the McGill campus. But I'm sure it will be met by many honestly open minds."

The English students responded with their loudest applause of the afternoon.

It is not hard to understand why René Lévesque would have a certain appeal for McGill students. His version of independence would not disturb them greatly, and he is one of the few politicians around who is willing at least to heal some of the more obvious sore spots in the corporate capitalist system. If they didn't agree with him, they were prepared to accept him. And for some of the more perceptive students, Lévesque didn't go far enough. Some of them asked about American economic domination and what he would do about that, and Lévesque's gradualist arguments didn't satisfy them. The rest seemed interested mostly in how an independent Québec would work, and where they would fit in.

The institutional position of McGill University, however, is something else again.

The men who speak publicly for McGill, whether they hide under the cloak of liberalism like Dean Cohen or are blatant Anglo-Saxon supremacists like Dean Frost, still see this University as an English bastion. They are unwilling to integrate McGill into Québec society or do anything that will damage its position in the English North American orbit. And, as their recent behavior in the English CEGEP affair demonstrates, they are willing to resort to any tactics to protect that position.

McGill has served the interests of the English business community without any concessions to the fact that it finds itself in the heart of Québec beyond the token — an insignificant and inactive French Canada Studies Programme on a par with the Italian Department.

The sycophancy of granting an honorary degree to the Chairman of the Board of Noranda Mines (characterized by Lévesque yesterday as "just the sort of people and attitude we don't want in an independent Québec") shows where McGill as an institution really stands.

And yet yesterday it appeared that there are people in the McGill community with open minds, people concerned with the welfare of Québec society as a whole, people whose views are quite different from those of the administrators.

Anyone worried about the good name of McGill should start seeing to it that no vocal minority of unrepresentative malcontents be allowed to dupe the public into believing they speak for the University as a whole.

Against the constitution

The need for a new constitution must not result in passing one that would be incapable of reflecting the needs and composition of the Students' Society. The many inconsistencies in the proposed constitutional amendments, would, if adopted in the referendum, leave the Students' Society in as chaotic a position as it is now. The basic underlying ideas of democratization and responsibility of the Hajaly, Hyman, Foster proposals are not easily applicable when it comes down to putting their amendments to practice. Three main areas of difficulty are Council representation, recall and the Judicial Board.

While the proposals do reach some sort of synthesis between the need to have all faculties represented and rep by pop, it is very unlikely that this system will be a stable one. For example, when the Post-Graduate students elect their councillors in March, they have no idea of the number of members their faculty will have after registration. Also, in faculties where membership is close to that magical 500 mark, there will be outcries for an additional rep, or conversely, should membership in a faculty decrease throughout a year, which one of their reps will lose his seat? Therefore, if the proposal is adopted, not only will we be with a Council too big to be efficient, but that Council will grow from year to year. The executive have rationalized their stand by claiming that the use of the committee system and adequate information would make this large size manageable. However, even in the present system, any issue on which a committee reported can lead to endless debate by our well-informed councillors.

The rationale for recall is that there must be an incentive to force reps to follow the wishes of their constituencies. However the automatic recall procedure cannot be put into use in the case of the Students' Society. In smaller faculties where 30 signatures would be sufficient to make a rep lose his seat, it is easily conceivable that a very capable councillor could be pressured by one person who has such signatures at his disposal. On the other hand, in Arts and Science, it seems impossible to collect 2000 signatures. Is it basically democratic to impose a burden on only some of the reps? Also, if a councillor can be in any year at university, the possibilities that he will want to be re-elected are as great as in the federal system, and this also is a factor against adopting an automatic recall procedure.

The amendment proposals would set up a Judicial Board which would have only nominal power and could be disregarded or overruled by anyone. By not making its decisions binding, the Board would serve no functions. The very idea of setting up the Board arose from the need to have an impartial body arbitrate on all questions. What effective check would a student have against a Council that acted illegally? Furthermore, the manner in which the Board would be appointed will leave it open to being a body composed of political nominations. Should a disagreement arise between the President of the Law Undergraduate Society and the President of the Students' Council, who should decide, a Council which is by nature political, or a third party who is more interested in the competence of the Justices? One final point on this topic; lowering the number of the judges serves no practical purpose. As in the past, Judges will continue to disqualify themselves because they have some interest in the case, and because of this, it would be difficult to have the full Judicial Board sitting in a case.

A formula that will be acceptable to all must be found. The different demands of

Sir,

I have one simple statement to make. So far this year the Administration of this university has spent over $100,000 on two public relations activities alone ($86,000 for "McGill Reporter", $18,000 on "Rendez-vous '68"). This money could have bought between 20,000 and 30,000 new, badly-needed books for the library.

I think the students of McGill deserve an explanation for this gross mis-application of resources.

The money changers in the temple

Sir,

The money-hungry imperialists are descending upon us in full force! The research survey that is taking place in B26 of the Union turns out to be a survey by the Bank of Montreal to find out how effective their sickening Lapinette cartoons are among the "college set".

Is there no way to protect oneself from the unscrupulous capitalistic swine who pervade the very bowels of our fortress?

Surely the rules governing who can use rooms in the Union are stretchable, but to this extent?

From there supporters of the cabbies will be transported to the 'celebration' of the 60th Anniversary of Murray Hill.

the Students' Society must be reflected in the new constitution. However, the proposals of Hajaly, Hyman and Foster are not designed to meet these needs. A constitution is meant to serve the long-term interest of the members who are bound by it, whereas the proposals would only lead to more dissent and thus not even solve the immediate problems facing us.

Priorities:

Our ideas and motivations are moulded by the "educational conditioning procedure" we undergo during the fifteen or so most formative years of our lives. Students must be involved in the decisions about the kind of education they receive.

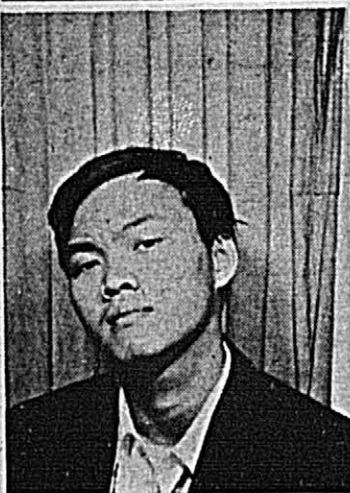

1. The University must demand that the Québec government implement long range educational planning formulated in conjunction with students.

2. University research must concern itself with social and economic problems of today. For example, studies on the economic planning and organisation of medical services in Montreal slums are drastically needed.

3. The University must insist that the Québec government implement a completely reorganised system of student financial aid in order to bring about universal accessibility. That is, a University education should not be limited only to those who can afford it.

DONALD CHAN, Arts & Science

- Donald Chan represents First and Second year students
- YOU!
- McGill students essentially here to obtain education - ALL ELSE SECONDARY.
- I and majority want only to learn. At university level libraries, communications with feedback, informality are absolutely necessary.
- We demand DECENT tutorials, smaller classes hiring more competent professors, better professor-student ratios.
- Curriculum relative to present and future, not past.
- Graduates with useful knowledge.
- Genesis - Resulting from intercourse of chairmen, professors, and students: challenging, interesting and pertinent courses.
- more commercial breaks for Chem 100 smogliends.
- McGill - an intellectual arena, not a battlefield.
- Senate - McGill's supreme academic body, not a political forum.
- Vote issues, not personalities.
- Responsible students
- Donald is unimportant. His ideas and views are not - they are the views of the majority of undergraduates - your views.
- Vote as your conscience dictates.
- Awaken senate - vote for a 17 year old student

ROSS DUNSMORE, Arts & Science

- Senate concentrates on educational policy.
- A concerned student is better than a politician.
- A typical McGill student cannot indulge in university politics. Academics must be elevated above university politics.
- The majority of students, academic liberals, must act now to prevent activist domination.
- Student Senator should present the viewpoints of the majority of the school.
- One position for one student: prevent a power trust.
- The freshmen must make themselves heard.
- At the moment, serious students must be politically concerned.

- Former member, National Executive of the N.D.P.
- Former National Secretary, N.D.P. Youth
- Chairman, Students' Society Constitution Committee, 1965-66

Priorities:

1. McGill's Senate must recognize that education is a right, not a privilege. It must pressure the Quebec government to implement concrete plans for universal accessibility. As a first step, interest on student loans should be eliminated and the grant-to-loan ratio increased.

2. Funds available for graduate research and teaching assistantships must be significantly increased. At present the ability of qualified students to undertake many types of graduate work is impaired, affecting undergraduate teaching quality and graduate research.

3. McGill's administration must be more responsive to the needs and interests of its students, e.g. housing policy and replacement of the code of student discipline by a university-wide code in order to eliminate any subservient status for students, and to protect all members of the university.

PETER FOSTER, Arts and Science

- Internal Vice-President (Students' Society)
- Founder, Birth Control Committee
- Arts Rep on Council, 1967
- Senate sub-committee on Academic Planning
- Council Committee on University Government

Priorities:

(1) Senate must consciously re-evaluate its present role as servant of and apologist for the status quo. The university's position in society must be critical and progressive. Senate must assume positions on important issues having relevance to the university, such as universal accessibility to education or the Quebec government's policies on educational reform and democratization.

(2) This new orientation must be reflected within the university:

(a) content of courses given: courses at present tend to limit the students' perspective to isolated aspects of the subject matter. A wide and integrated over-view is essential.

(b) research done: McGill's research potential should be directed in line with this new orientation, with more emphasis on fields like urban planning and community organizing than on narrow and specialized work financed by big corporations.

Programme:

- (2) Assurance of sufficient student representation on faculty and departmental bodies.
- (3) Real right of appeal re-exams opportunity to make personal appeals to open meetings of committees on standing and promotion
- (4) Educational reform for the sake of improvement, not just for the sake of change.
- (5) Having Senate take all possible steps to ensure the continuation of English-language educational rights in Quebec.

Priorities:

- Senate should take clear positions and make its influence felt on pressing educational and social issues - e.g. universal accessibility, English-speaking CEGEPs and second French University.
- Change of curricula and courses to enable and encourage students to critically evaluate existing social relations and values, and to develop viable alternatives. Students should be more than superficially aware of the impact of their work or profession on society.
- Specifically, implementation of printed course notes to free students from passive and unquestioning behaviour in lectures; transformation of grading system into a form of pass-fail; more efficient use of physical facilities, for example through trimester system.
- Support for substantial student representation on Faculty and Departmental bodies meeting in open session.

MARVIN HUBERMAN, Medicine

- Combined course in Science and Medicine
- Co-editor, first year medicine newspaper
- Member, Students' Society Education Committee
- University Scholar, 1966-68

Priorities:

1. A Responsive Senate: Senate must become attuned to the needs of students, e.g. adequate student housing, and a summer job placement service able to provide employment commensurate with interests and abilities.

2. McGill and Quebec: Senate must impress on Quebec the necessity of establishing a coherent, planned approach to education, guaranteeing the right of students to be actively involved in decision-making.

- Universal accessibility

- Adequate research grants for undergraduates, e.g. to encourage those in science to think independently rather than imbibing data blindly.

3. The University and Social Involvement: McGill has an obligation not only to create technically competent people but also individuals prepared to critically analyse the problems of society.

- Revision of the lecture system

- Increased emphasis on teaching and research of broader social problems, for example those of community and public health in medicine.

- Senate Committees on Development, Libraries and Communications.
- Initiator, University Conversational French Course.
- Chairman, Science Council, 1967.
- Honours Physics.

Priorities:

Senate must come to regard education primarily as an increasing of the student's ability to analyze situations and attack problems rather than just a "mastery" of facts and theories, i.e. Not "filling the bucket" but "increasing its capacity".

● "Institutional neutrality" is a meaningless concept since the university's actions have repercussions throughout society, as does lack of action. McGill should consciously strive to be a primary initiator of social progress.

● When promotion and academic status are based almost entirely on research ability and administrative work, there is little wonder that teaching is generally poor. Senate must develop a method of evaluating teaching ability and rewarding conscientious and skilled work.

SEYMOUR KAUFMAN, Commerce

- Honours Economics
- McGill Daily '66-67, '67-68, '68-69
- Commerce Undergraduate Society 2nd year rep '67-68

- Member, Hillel Human Rights Committee '68-69

Programme:

- (1) Implementation of a trimester system in order to accommodate a growing student body and to decrease the number of students converging on the job market at any one time.
- (2) Revision of Senate priorities to give emphasis to the matters of student loans, student housing, an improved placement service and expanded and meaningful faculty calendars.
- (3) Encourage Senate to take steps to insure English language educational rights in Quebec.
- (4) Encourage Senate to support CEGEPs. Senate must stop procrastinating and come to a conclusive decision - yes or no.
- (5) Revision of Student Disciplinary Code to make it a University Disciplinary Code.
- (6) Establish a Committee on Promotions and Standing for each faculty and implement a real right of appeal by granting option of open hearings before these committees.

CHRIS MAYNARD

This candidate has withdrawn, but his name will appear on the ballot.

ANDRE MECS, Law

- 1) Students' Council Representative of Faculty of Law
- 2) Special Events Chairman, Open House
- 3) Student member of Senate Committee on Academic Planning

Platform:

Our representatives on Senate must prove that they are willing to intelligently co-operate in the administration of this University. Our academic and social objectives cannot be viewed outside the context of a society with limited resources. We must also realize that as part of the intellectual segment of the community, the students' role is basically one of training for future leadership.

On Senate, André Mecs will try to establish a list of priorities which will reflect, first, the actual educational needs of McGill students, second, the social role of university students.

For example, course design and academic policy will obtain top priority, as these are topics that relate to students directly in their capacity as students.

BOB ORFORD, Medicine

Pensketch:

Bob represents a wide sector of the university. He is presently treasurer of the Medical Students' Society, a member of N.S.N. medical fraternity, a resident of Douglas Hall and an active member of several campus clubs and societies.

Platform:

Just a few of his many ideas are:

- 1) Decentralization of the Students' Society to a federation of faculties.
- 2) Faculty representation on Students' Council(s).
- 3) Democratization of university structure (Daily, Police force etc.)

Democratization is not a one-way street. If students are given representation on faculty governing bodies, should not the administrators be offered the same rights in student affairs? The necessity for an increased student participation in the education process is both fundamental and obvious. However, it is evident that the present student government and many of the current candidates still reason from a pre-democratization, conservative perspective and that true democratization would best be served by electing Bob Orford as student representative on Senate.

NIGEL HAMER, Engineering

- Fourth year Honours Electrical Engineering
- Member, Senate Educational Procedures Subcommittee
- Chairman, Student's Society Education Committee
- Chairman, Engineering Undergraduate Society Curriculum Committee.
- UGEQ delegate 1968

Priorities:

1. Curriculum Reform:

The present division of subject matter into narrow and arbitrary disciplines is artificial and results in a very fragmented concept of education. Only by effective action at the university-wide level can this compartmentalization be eliminated.

Students, especially those in the professional faculties like Engineering must be encouraged to critically evaluate the impact of their work on society.

2. Educational Research:

Work on the establishment of the Department of Higher Education must be intensified so that concerted research on the implementation of new teaching methods can be initiated without delay.

The present lecture system is archaic and viable alternatives must be presented.

3. University's Role in Society:

McGill should cease to be a service station for the business interests on its Board of Governors. The University should lead society and take progressive positions on major issues.

KENNETH WAYNE, Graduate Studies

- President (1968-9), Vice-President (1967-8), Post-Graduate Students' Society
- Students' Council Representative (Graduate Studies & Research)
- Delegate, Third UGEQ Congress

Programme

1 Educational Priorities

- McGill must fully utilize present facilities, and institute trimester system
- Senate must enunciate a definitive position upon its intentions vis-à-vis CEGEPs, and become instrumentally involved in French-Canadian society, particularly in educational reform

2 Loans and Bursaries

- Senate has the obligation to press for change in the Government's policies in student aid and the financing of higher education
- institution of emergency interest-free loan service for short-term requirements
- elimination of discriminatory policy in awarding loans and bursaries vis-à-vis students unable to find summer employment

3 Decision-Making

- senate representatives must actively seek the implementation of campus-supported policies, and not assume an ivory-tower approach, reserving decisions to a select few.

LAWRENCE WEISER, Arts & Science

If our student senators are to be effective, they must not go in with the ideas: "revolt", "conquer", "destroy", "reorganize", and "control". If this be the case, we would be replacing one all-encompassing power clique by another.

Students must not only be concerned with democratizing the administration, but also be willing to democratize the Students' Society by preventing the creation of an oligarchy.

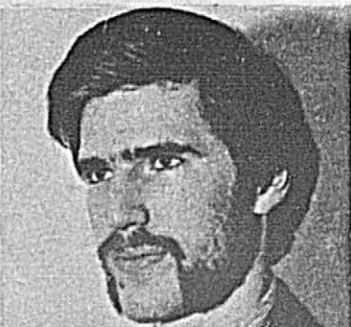

The present executive of the Students' Council represent the Student Establishment — the Student Status Quo. Along with their peripherals, they are running on a slate.

Candidates running separate campaigns are the responsible individualists that we need to represent the Students' Society. Not a rubber stamp collectivist slate!

Priorities

1. Stop discriminatory distribution of Provincial University Grants
2. Withdraw from UGEQ
3. Bookstore expansion
4. Expand study room facilities
5. Reduce large classes
6. Establish tri-mester educational system

A vote for WEISER is a vote for RESPONSIBLE, EFFECTIVE REPRESENTATION.

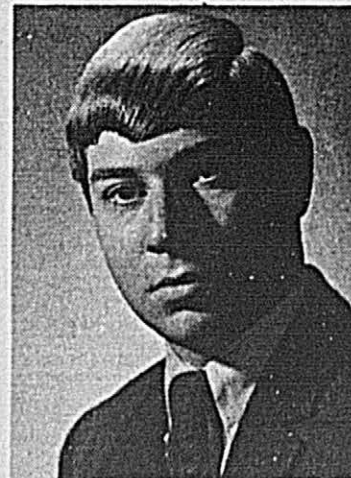

CHARLES MALLORY, Commerce

Charles Mallory represents an independent point of view. He is not a campus politician; but he was one of the two students concerned enough to defend his ideas about university education before the Tripartite Commission; he is also a member of a teacher-student liaison committee in one of his economics courses, hoping in this way to help build a better course. On Senate also he would concern himself mainly with improving education.

While it is important that all student representatives, on Senate and on Council, should work closely together, this does not mean that only a single point of view should be represented.

With regard to student power, Charles feels that students can contribute to the better functioning of the university and that they should be given an effective voice. Only the future can determine whether eight voices out of sixty-five can be effective.

7) These amendments shall become effective immediately.

Emphasis placed on course relevance

Social Work airs grievances

The School of Social Work has joined the growing family of dissatisfied departments at McGill.

Yesterday students of the School held an all-day study session to discuss their problems and possible solutions.

Graduates of the School attended the session, and outlined past efforts to effect change in the department, and also spoke on the relevance of school courses to the actual practice of the profession.

Small group discussions followed in which students expressed their dissatisfaction in a number of areas. Major issues were course content and teaching methods, perennial topics in the School and in the university at large. Students are concerned with the relevance of current social work education to professional practice; they feel that their education is lacking in vital aspects. Also they wish more student participation in decision-making at the school.

Speakers at the meeting were Bryan Knight, director of the Park Extension Community Project, Susan White, community organizer at University Settlement, Joy Smith of the Society for the Protection of Women and Children, and Peter Katadotis, director of the Urban Social Redevelopment Project.

Staff members joined in the afternoon workshop, during which students evolved proposals for change in specific areas. Another meeting is planned for November 4 at lunch hour to discuss these issues.

A permanent Student Committee was elected to recommend issues to be given priority by students, and to implement some action on these issues.

Pelletier 'sides' with students

MONTREAL (CUP) — Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier, in perhaps a glimpse of what is to come from his department in the near future, yesterday praised what he said were student proposals for a 12-month academic year and conscription of youth to work for a year in civil service.

Speaking to the Montreal Chambre de Commerce, Pelletier evoked everything from the generation gap to we-were-once-20-too in a condemnation of the older generation which refuses "to face the worldwide dispute" in which they are the central issue.

"Just because young people are suggesting a world which seems absurd to us," he said, "we react most often with complete negativity. What is more serious is that we react by trying to impose on them our conception of the world and our ideas on life."

Pelletier cautioned against a government youth program that might function as a "ploy" to force youths into status quo positions. Rather the policy must "help" young people "give expression to their ideas".

He called the short school year a "relic" of a middle class world and an agricultural society where students had to help in the summer harvest.

The year of service would enable students "to work with their hands and with the brains to build their country... so they can play their part in creating a more just society."

The economic consequences of the two programs, of course, "are unknown because no one has studied them in detail yet".

"Frustration and unrest among young people," he concluded, "will persist as long as they have not found, with our help the ways in which they can increase their participation in society and the visions of the future which make a new world possible".

The tempers flared as the meeting dragged on, and suggestions were made that one group was trying to extend the voting so as to assure the required two-thirds majority to carry the constitutional amendments, and trying to close campaigning on the senate elections.

Other Council members argued that cutting the two-day vote was a deliberate attempt to diminish the chances of the amendments receiving the necessary two-thirds majority, and that some Council members running for Senate were trying to get an extra day of electioneering in by pushing the vote back one day.

The motion to cancel today's voting was carried 8-6-2. Voting for the motion were Michael Clarke (engineering), Judi Fish (P&OT), Julius Grey (Arts and Science), Ann Hickin (Nursing) André Mécs (Law), Niederhoffer, Joel Raby (Commerce) Kenneth Wayne (Graduate Studies). Opposed were Joanne Carson (Education) Sydney Dumaresq (Architecture) Peter Foster (Internal Vice-President) Nicole Leduc (Arts and Science), Sheldon Schreter (Arts and Science). Mrs. Doreen Laszlo (Dentistry) and Marc Ryan (Engineering) abstained.

Criticism was levelled by some Council members because Chief Returning Officer Chris Portner was not consulted before the vote was taken.

Portner was informed of the move an hour later, and appeared before Council to criticize the action.

"The distribution of polls was made equitably," he told Council, "with all four corners and the centre of the campus covered."

"I see no coherent or rational argument," he added, "to cancel tomorrow's poll." He expressed anger at "the fact that the common courtesy of consulting with me on the facts before changing the machinery was not even extended."

Clarke moved to reconsider the motion, but the necessary two-thirds majority was not obtained.

seats. She protested that council members would vote on the report, which contains plans for the construction of a 350-unit co-op residence, not on its merits but according to political considerations.

She moved to adjourn.

Students' Society President Robert Hajaly, who was chairing the meeting, urged council not to adjourn, since delays in considering the housing plans could prevent the Students' Society from obtaining an option on the land it required. Mrs. Laszlo's motion was defeated, but only after a tie vote had been broken by the chairman.

Melvyn Niederhoffer (Graduate Studies) also complained that the housing study was being used for the political advantage of councillors who were contesting Senate seats.

Students' Society Internal Vice-President Peter Foster charged that Niederhoffer was "trying to penalize the executive for living up to their campaign promises". Foster also claimed that Niederhoffer was insulting his integrity by suggesting that he would vote on an issue on anything but its merit.

Niederhoffer replied that in a sense he was insulting the integrity of all members, including himself. Certainly not Foster specifically.

Joel Raby (Commerce) charged that the chairman was speaking too much, in violation of Roberts'

Rules of Order which council had recently adopted.

Foster charged that Raby was trying to frustrate any progress that council could make on the housing report and had "no intention of discussing the issues at hand". Foster called the arguments presented against discussing the report "an attempt by certain council members to electioneer on the floor of council and obstruct one of the most important and pressing items of Students' Society business".

Raby's motion to adjourn carried 8-6.

Decide

Would you rather sit back and count days on the calendar or go swimming and dancing any day of the month?

Would you rather wear dark, full skirts 5 days in a row or your sleekest clothes in the palest colors—even white?

Would you rather try to conceal a bulky package or tuck spares right in your purse?

Would you rather worry about "What do I do now?" or simply dispose by flushing away?

You probably know what we're talking about by now. The complicated versus the modern way—internally worn sanitary protection—Tampax tampons. It's pretty clear that Tampax tampons give you more freedom and comfort. Give you more confidence, peace of mind and flexibility. That's because they're so dainty and feminine. Belts, pins and pads are a thing of the past! But don't just take our word for it—decide for yourself. All by yourself. Try the better way—Tampax tampons. This month. Or next.
